DIGESTS OF CURRENT NYC THEATRE REVIEWS

The Breaking Wall- St Marks- 1/25. 1 pro- Times-and 4 con- Herald Tribune, Post, Journal American, World Telegram & Sun- filed on new play by Louis A. Lippa presented by Lionel Kaplan-Philip Meister, staged by Meister with Alan Ansara, Jerome Guardino, Joanna Merlin, Linda Marsha. Sole affirmative vote praised first rate acting and writing, while negative majority generally agreed both elements were competent but felt plot lacked interest. Atkinson, Times, cheered author's genuine gift for drawing character and for his talent of bringing characters vividly alive, Ansara and Merlin also were applauded for fine performances. Critic had minor complaint about too violent emotional climaxes, violently played, but he admitted he wasn't going to cry "wolf" too loudly for an otherwise first rate piece of work. Two dissenters, Kerr, Herald Tribune, and McClain, Journal American, agreed play was competently written, directed and acted but feared that complete lack of character change and audience interest works against it. Kerr also noted major fault in having an irritating rather than alarming villain. Herridge, Post, believed play not as good as the author's first NY production A House Remembered presented three years ago Off Broadway. Current play shows he has a lot of maturing to do, and a lot of rough edges to polish. Drama editor also panned the minor cast members as disconcerting and the direction as stilted. Aston, WTS, marked it off as an elementary drama that became confused and loud at the end, inspite of enjoyable performances.

Parade- Players- 1/20. 4 pro- Post, Journal American, News, World Telegram & Sun- and 2 con- Times, Herald Tribune- filed on new revue with music, lyrics and direction by Jerry Herman, presented by Lawrence Kasha with Dody Goodman, Charles Nelson Reilly, Richard Tone, Fia Karin. Pros ranged from likeable, easy entertainment to rave views, while cons thought material too thin and first night audience too loud. McClain, Journal American, and Aston, WTS, filed the raves. Former cheered both revue and Goodman as presenting a most hilarious and bountiful small-theatre evening, a charming Off Broadway musical. Latter felt it ranked with best of revues with style, pace and bit, presented with speed and zest. He noted cast had first night jitters which made them a little loud, but was sure this would be corrected. McHarry, News, okayed Goodman and cast in revue with uneven material, which ranged from fair to unbearable and with too few sketches. Watts, Post, rated revue likeable, with a becoming modesty, unpretentious and tuneful. He reported that first nighters outbursts of violent applause and shouts of "Bravo" were not only extravagantly excessive to the point of annoyance, but had the effect of getting in the performers' way and making them at times inaudible. Negative voter Atkinson, Times, panned both material and cast, while praising production designed by Gary Smith as professional Little Broadway style. Singers screamed songs so loud they must have been heard outside the theatre, Times aisle-sitter concluded, and material was all thin of one-note type. Kerr, Herald Tribune, recommended the first night audience as great, and thought a truly astute theatrical manager should have hired them on the spot. They thundered approval of everything, and if any of the material had been especially entertaining, critic dreads to think what might have happened. A "no-comment" revue with the lyrics too often willing to let the inevitable stay put and the pleasing ballads offering no surprises. Kerr summed.

Lambs Club Honors Atkinson

200 actor members of The Lambs attended a special luncheon honoring Brooks Atkinson, Times, who will retire as a daily drama critic at the end of the season. He told the members of the enemy camp that this was the first time he had ever been in their building at 128 W 44. The function of the critic is not to promote theatre but to write what he believes to be true, the reviewer said. If he has given any service to the theatre, he feels it is only fair for the theatre has given him a rich life. Reviewer recalled that during his four years as a foreign correspondent it seemed that the theatre crowded everything that was good into it, including Oklahoma, Three Sisters and the Old Vic with Laurence Olivier, and that when he returned the theatre went back to the old malarkey. Atkinson will write a twice weekly column for the Times on theatre as well as general topics.

THEATRE

COMMENTS

"Act One" by Moss Hart (Random House) recommended as a fascinating mixture of humility and arrogance, envy and generosity, common sense and cantankerousness by Coleman, Mirror. If you haven't read it you won't be able to cope with the conversation at afternoon teas, reviewer warns.

COMMENTS

London Records uncut albums of Shakespeare plays in the John Dover Wilson editions is the most ambitious effort ever undertaken in the field of spoken records and is an attempt to put on records a Shakespeare specifically tailored for home listening, complements Kupferberg, Herald Tribune. The anonymous cast members of the Marlowe Society of Cambridge under the direction of George Rylands may or may not contain name actors, but none are listed. Already recorded are Richard II, Othello, Coriolanus, The Merchant of Venice, Measure for Measure, King John and the Sonnets. As a set these initial recordings bear the earmarks of a great memorial to the Bard. The only word for them is stunning, so raptly do they hold the listener and so invitingly do they open the portals of Shakespeare's poetry and dramas, record reviewer raves.

GREEN
DEPARTMENT

FRENCH THEATRE STORM... Revision of operations of Comedie-Francise with a new head and a new order to place more emphasis on 17th century French tragedy and less on 19th century French farce has evidently not been much to the taste of the public and even less to that of the actors, surmises Herald Tribune editorial. It is not an argument against government subsidy, but an illustration that a national theatre flourishes best when the nation in question gives it all possible independence and autonomy. Editorial hopes that problem will be solved and soon another fine touring company will play NYC again, even with a little 17th century theatre.

CRITIC EMPLOYMENT DEPT... Walter Kerr to be next critic of New Yorker, replacing Kenneth Tyan, predict both Walker, News, and Winchell, Mirror... Arthur Gelb, Times, is selection of Atkinson for his replacement, hears Kilgallen, Journal American.

STATE OF THEATRE... The theatre almost seems to go out of its way to discourage those who love it best, concludes Watts, Post. The cost of playgoing increasingly threatens to limit to those least likely to appreciate the drama's loftiest flights. One result is that people who used to see 10 or 15 plays a season now get to see one or two. Considering the handicaps, critic notes, it's a tribute to the theatre that it has the health and spirit it still possesses.

COLUMN TIPS... John Gielgud may return to NY next season in Dore Schary's adaptation of Devil's Advocate, hears Lyons, Post, Zolotow, Times, report Gielgud's next London production to be in Enid Bagnold's new play... Laurence Olivier can make and play in a film version of Hamlet backed by Huntington Hartford, if he first appears in London production of Jane Eyre, details Kilgallen, Journal American CRITICAL THOUGHTS... Why doesn't William Inge stop writing plays about the Kansas he was sensible enough to leave in the first place asks Watt, News... Earlids is the only way to avoid newspaper criticism, Peter Shaffer, author of Five Finger Exercise, told Aston, WTS... McClain, Journal American, wonders how you prepare yourself to see Roman Candle, a comedy about ESP short of concentrating on his wife to see what he can do about some of her very bad habits... Watts, Post, hopes NY Shakespeare Festival gets the 15,000 $7.50 subscribers it needs, Joe Papp's excellent productions deserve them.

HITS REVISITED... The Music Man with Norwood Smith, who subbed for ailing Eddie Albert, as viewed from the first act by Chapman, News, seemed a bit raggedy, but he found that some of the original cast members, Helen Raymond and Igzie Wolfgang were still doing fine. Reviewer suggests composer Meredith Willson as star of his own show... Sweet Bird of Youth remains magnificent theatre, sums Herridge, Post, who saw show in its final NY week prior to its national tour. Geraldine Page's stunning display of acting gives the play its tremendous impact. Rip Torn, who replaced Paul Newman, sharpens the meaning of the play and gives it more credibility than before. Only weak note in cast is Diana Dyland who has developed two monotonous mannerisms--loud breathing to show her inner turbulence and a strained headcocking.

DALLAS & BOSTON AUDIENCES... Dallas theatre-goers at The Cross-Eyed Bear by Gene McKinney, first production in the new Frank Lloyd Wright designed Humphreys Theatre are alert, perceptive, sympathetic rates Crosby, Herald Tribune. Play itself is a very experimental morality play, vivid, fresh, witty, but uneven in texture. ... Boston Show of Month members voted in Playbill poll for a once weekly 7:30 PM curtain, more musicals and dramas, detailed Little Herald Tribune. They also would like to see more Off Broadway dramas each season.

PROS & CONS BY TMK

The Breaking Wall is an interesting, serious melodrama that features simple, warm honest writing and a trio of superb performances. The Italian peasant background and characters are believably presented and the strength of the dialogue overcomes some pretty awful acting in the minor roles. While the major roles--Alan Ansara, Jerome Guardino, Joanna Merlin -- as well as the direction hold the interest and excitement of the viewers until the very end.

* * *

Parade is a pleasant, painless musical showcase of the song-writing abilities of Jerry Herman presented by a handsome cast on a stylishly set stage. The quintet of performers perform admirably the assorted ballads and comedy songs. Several of the ballads are charming and worthy of attention. Though the comedy songs all sound as if they were written to the same music. The lyrics take minor jabs at current topics without digging very deeply and/or cleverly into any. Pleasure seekers will find it an amiable revue minus sketches.

* * *

"The Living Theatre" current repertory productions Tonight We Improvise and The Connection are both lively, audience participation productions brilliant in technical conception of direction, setting, lighting, but vastly uneven in cast talents. The actors in both contain excellent portrayals and many self-conscious amateur portrayals. The new version of Pirandello's Tonight We Improvise is superb in the rehearsed by-play between director and "audience-members" and in its serious final act, but many times gets out-of-hand completely in the segments with large crowd scenes. The Connection is a unique blend of onstage jazz (live) and a minute documentary of the dull lives of drug addicts that would be vastly aided by a rewrite or two. The first act of Jack Gelber's script is a non-moving portrait in which nothing happens slowly, while the second is an exciting blend of terror, jazz, up-dated Pirandello in which the author is forced to take drugs by the cast, and a strong message play. Inspite of their faults the two Living Theatre productions make stimulating Off Broadway fare, a charge that cannot be leveled often.

* * *

Jan. theatre in NYC was dismal by any standards. Several Broadway shows opened and closed quietly and quickly, a handful of productions on tryout tours lost courage and folded out-of-town, and a few of the worst Off Broadway shows in recent seasons lasted a week or so each before leaving the premises for the next tenant. Except for the two bill of Beckett and Edward Albee playlets at the Provincetown, everyone concerned with good theatre could have gone on vacation during Jan. Thankfully Feb. looks like a busy, useful month, both on and Off Broadway. Theatre, like the sale of life insurance works on the famed Law of Averages--the more tries the more possible sales-- and the only solution, praise be, is more productions. On and Off Broadway, good and bad.

* * *

If you forgive the WNTA Play of the Week series Lullaby as a summer stock mistake, the announced programs forthcoming are a fine repertory for any theatre in the nation. Miss Julie, Tiger at the Gates, and Don Juan in Hell in successive weeks with top casts of Broadway and Off Broadway talent is a good reason for any theatre fan to move to the NY area until these taped full-length productions are viewed throughout the country.

* * *

The ANTA Assembly panels take up dozens of pertinent theatre topics, but leave out a major discussion of the price of theatre tickets in NYC and out-of-town. Certainly the cost of playgoing and how price effects attendance is a subject worthy of discussion by theatre leaders throughout the country.
